It is updated and did not change the total; do you still want a new signed invoice copy?

Thanks!

I see. Would it be possible to combine them into one visit? It just looks odd from an audit standpoint because A2A is billed by the client, regardless of how many children are involved.

OH!

Now, it makes sense. Because it's twins. We bill half the time for one and the other half for the other twin. Does that make sense?

Thanks!

Hi Megan – What I meant is that there are four visits total, with back to back visits on both 12/15 and 12/29. Why are there back to back visits on the same day?

Hi Emily!

So, the reason these look the same is because this particular nurse starts all of her visit notes the same way. And unfortunately, the space given doesn't allow for all of the other information to be included.

Here are the full notes from each visit:

12/15:
Routine visit with client. Invited into clean nicely furnished home Home is cool and all utilities are on. Present at visit are Mom and infants

Mom assessment completed and documented. VSS. Denies any medical concerns at this time. All education completed and documented. Discussed nutrition and what to feed baby. Discussed support persons important to family. client is bottle feeding. Client is under a lot of stress has anxiety currently taking xanax that is prescribed. States she got her meds stolen from her

Infant assessment completed and documented. VSS. Skin warm and dry. Lungs clear with good aeration and respiration even and unlabored. Infant is clean and dressed appropriately for weather. Physical assessment WNL. Weight gain and development appropriate for age. Education and anticipatory guidance completed and documented. Growing well and eating good. talked with client about tummy time and not leaving the alone because they are starting to roll. discussed ways to sooth teething also .

Plan is to revisit per NFN policy. Mom encouraged to call with any questions or concerns prior to that visit. Mom verbalized understanding of all information and agreeable to plan.

Hi Megan,

I finished reviewing your December invoice and noticed the following item:

[redacted] – It appears this client has two back to back home visits on both 12/15 and 12/29 with the same service descriptions. Are these duplicates? If not, please alter the service descriptions so that they reflect the topics discussed and show that these visits were not duplicates. If so, please remove from invoice and send revised cover page.

Thanks,

Emily Kraft
